

Due to the change in law, which effects depositions taken after 1-1-98, reporters have asked how they will be able to locate deponents, especially nonparty deponents. The law requires the reporter to notify the deponent “at his or her last known address” of the request made by a nonparty to purchase the transcript.

Using the form below, or something similar, is one suggested method of attempting to comply with that law. This is a good tool to inform deponents that their deposition may be purchased by nonparties.

Effective January 1, 1998, a nonparty may obtain a copy of your deposition transcript. Under new legislation, you will be notified in the event someone requests your transcript and will be provided an opportunity to seek a protective order in case you do not want your transcript sold.

So that we may contact you if and when this occurs, please provide your name and address so that we may have it available. It will also be your responsibility to update us if your address changes, if you so desire.
